Collin County Auditor to take same position in Denton County

The Collin County Auditor will soon work for Denton County, filling the position soon to be vacated by retiring Denton County Auditor James Wells.

On Tuesday, Denton County Commissioners unanimously accepted the appointment of Jeff May as the new Denton County Auditor by Denton County District Judges. May's first day in the new job will be April 1.

May, a graduate of Texas Tech, brings 29 years in government accounting, finance and audit to his new position. In addition to his bachelor's degree in business administration in finance, May has earned certifications as a Government Finance Officer and County Investment Officer.

He has served more than nine years as the Collin County Auditor.

He currently serves as president of the Texas Association of County Auditors.

"I'm extremely honored to step into Mr. Wells' footsteps following his 37 years of public service," May said.
